

The Trump Administration's Plan to Ease Regulations on Weapons Exports

The Trump Administration is making it easier for U.S. weapons to proliferate around the world.

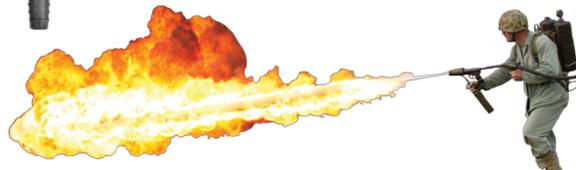

Through a unilateral rule change, the Administration will eliminate congressional oversight of certain weapons exports, making it easier for these deadly weapons to end up in the hands of governments that violate human rights, arms traffickers, and international crime syndicates.

Which weapons are included? Here's just a few.

Semi-automatic rifles

Flamethrowers

Cannon and grenade launcher parts

Another effect of this policy change? Anyone with a computer will be able to download 3-D Gun software, which can be used to print a fully functioning plastic gun that is undetectable by metal detectors.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee will work to reverse this dangerous decision.

The Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee is holding a hearing on this policy change Tuesday, March 26, 2019 at 10 AM.

Video